“ I was a pathology resident at NCI from 1984-1987, and learned a great deal of pathology from Alex Dock who was both extremely knowledgeable and a terrific teacher. He was also a wonderful, caring person who everyone liked. All of us who knew him will remember him very fondly and miss him. He was a real “mensch”.
Susan Mackem, NCI.

“ Alex Dock taught me and many other NCI pathology residents the basics of autopsy practice. He was wonderful to work with and I looked up to him as a mentor. Later, when I took over as medical director of the autopsy service he became my employee, but I always deferred to his judgement when it came to running the service. I've thought about him a lot since his retirement, always hearing through mutual friends that he was doing well. He will be missed.

“ Alex Dock was an employee of the Laboratory of Pathology, National Cancer Institute for many years. When I was a resident in pathology in 1970, he taught me how to do an autopsy. He was a pillar of our department, and someone all of the faculty and residents looked up to. He always had a smile on his face, and was patient with new trainees. He was a master of his field.
