“ *Dear Phyllis—
You were the best colleague anyone could have—you set high standards of quality and productivity for yourself in your work, you achieved and raised those standards, and you helped others do the same in their roles. You loved and valued every aspect of publishing: the skills, the knowhow, the tasks, and the people. You encouraged, inspired, corrected, advised, and counseled with wisdom and insight. You benefited the National Academies and the Transportation Research Board for more than half a century—the colleagues you blessed are countless, as are the publications you improved. You modeled love and devotion to your family. You knew that your abilities were God-given and God-nurtured, and you acknowledged and relied on the Giver—you were an effective Ambassador for Jesus Christ. Now you are rejoicing in His presence and hearing His “Well done!” Thank you, Phyllis, for blessing so many lives, and thank you, God, for Phyllis!
With love and admiration always,
Javy*
